The Irish oil-well fireman, Green Adair, was offered ten million dollars to put out an oil-well fire. The oil workers watched, amazed, as Green Adair's truck, filled with his specialist firemen, drove straight into the heart of the blaze, then the men all leapt out of the truck and furiously stamped out the fire. After the fire was out, Green was interviewed by a national news service. “What are you going to do with the ten million dollars?” asked the interviewer. “Well, first thing,” said Green, “we're going to get the brakes fixed on that truck!”
